

Let's Practice!

The day has finally come ...

Instructions: Read the sentences below and circle the incorrect words.

1. The day was finally come, and I am prepared.
2. It has been get hard to get around these days.
3. I has been anticipated this day for 75 years, ever since the first visitors came.
4. I has think of this incredible journey since I was a girl.
5. I have waist for this day all my life.

Let's Practice!

Imagine you write fictional stories for a living. You enjoy writing about people from outer space.

Instructions: Write a 150-170 word narrative about a coincidence or strange event.

Choose characters, a setting, a plot and a conclusion.

You should structure your narrative to have a series of events. What happens first? Second?

Use rich descriptions to make your writing interesting.

Write about past actions, actions that began in the past that are connected to the present in some way and actions that have been repeated over a long time. (the grammar tenses you have been learning in this learning object.

Use simple, compound and complex sentences.
